The nursery looked absolutely beautiful on the Sunday 23rd November when the Education Centre was opened.

Many thanks are due to so many members through whose efforts the day went off without a hitch and everybody had a good time.

The AGM was the first order of business during the day and words from the reports have been included on pages 2-4. The ranger's report is on p7. In spite of extraordinary expenses during the year, Lyndy's treasurer's report was good news. The only hitch was the increasingly loud vocalisations of a Peron's Tree Frog inside the Folly.

The most exciting event for most of us was the opening of the long awaited Education Centre by founding FOWSP member Val Polley. "It is gratifying to see how far FOWSP and the nursery have come in 32 years. May this building seed equal progress over the next 30 years," she said. The plaque she unveiled (pictured R) was designed and produced by FOWSP member Gray Ardern.

This newsletter is sprinkled with photos taken at the AGM and the Education Centre opening

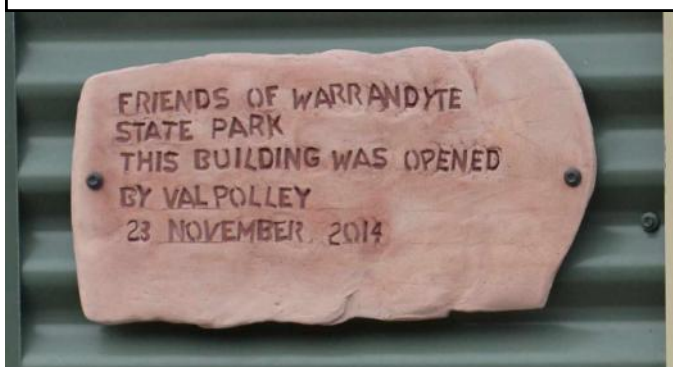

In addition to listing of details of various exciting activities, this edition includes a debut article from Alison Thom. She shares a day spent with Friends of Burnley Gardens learning about the scarce grasslands remaining in the west of Melbourne p. 9.

Ben's I Spy gives us a couple of pithy snippets p. 9.

Once again we have some wonderful contributions

Annual reports given at FOWSP AGM 23rd November 2014

Gray began, "I'd like to thank Parks Victoria - and Conrad, our Ranger-in-Charge - for allowing us to play a small part in making Warrandyte State Park the wonderful asset that it is. We thank Conrad and his hard-working staff for all the help and support we have had this year. This year our activities have focussed on Pound Bend – that is the big chunk of land bounded by the Tunnel and the Yarra." Sarah Bond very capably presented the Nursery Report in Josh's absence. The following includes elements from both reports:-

Thursday Activity Groups (TAGs) & other activities

Fortnightly TAGs have been very successful over the year. The activities have ranged from weeding to planting and parks maintenance. The regular bunch of TAGers have become so competent that they often lead their own activities out in the park! Keep up the good work TAGers!

At the Lower Orchard Track site, we put in 3 maintenance mornings plus 3 planting mornings, including National Tree Day. At Boys Road there was a planting morning and a maintenance morning with another planting morning at Pound Bend Reserve.

Our new planting this year is again at Pound Bend, between our Boys Rd site and the Yarra. We seem to have settled on Three Bridges as its name – after the first three bridges on the riverside track which passes through the planting. This planting was especially bittersweet for some long term members. We dedicated it to Joan MacMahon who we sadly lost this year. Joan, a long-term and much loved member, was passionate about the local environment and would have been very happy with us enhancing the riparian corridor in her memory. The planting was done on three work-days. Around 1000 plants have been put in in fond memory of Joan.

Other plantings include: Wurundjeri Women's Ceremony – 500 plants; Brushy Creek Landowners 1,500; Murundaka Wetlands (300 plants from FOWSP); Amenity plantings around the park (including Longridge, Tills Drive, and Black Flat entrance) – 200 plants; Kinglake National Park– 400 plants (Kinglake staff were very appreciative for the assistance); National Tree Day at Orchard Track – 400 plants by 50+ people including the Joey Scouts from Warrandyte

Helping with the planting program were Melb. Water Program and Corporate groups including GlaxoSmith-Kline, Franklin TAFE, Stockland and The Pines.

As the largest member of MYLN (Middle Yarra Landcare Network) with extensive nursery capabilities, we enjoy supporting joint projects with Jumping Creek, ACCA (Anderson's Creek Catchment Area) and WPEG (Wonga Park Environment Group).

Two propagation courses have been run on weekends at the nursery with great interest from attendees.

Every planting needs follow-up, and that is one of the main aims of our TAG programme. Sometimes a TAG will take us into a more distant section of the Park, perhaps even to a part of the Park that is not open to the general public. Two woody-weeding days and a planting day at One Tree Hill were such occasions.

We have been supporting local schools by providing 50 free plants annually for school ground plantings. Anderson Creek has taken this further than expected, purchasing additional plants and holding working bees with parents to beautify the school-grounds.

On Thursdays when there is no Ranger-led TAG, a group of us did follow-up work, especially woody-weeding. This year we concentrated on 'woodies' within Pound Bend.

While the Woody Weeders are out in the bush, the main body of Thursday participants is busy in the Nursery producing thousands and thousands of indigenous plants. This year the nursery produced 55,000 plants.

At the same time Noel and team are down in the Folly building nest-boxes, including great big boxes for Powerful Owls to nest in, since so many old trees with big hollows were destroyed in the bushfires.

Thursday mornings at the Nursery are always great fun, and this year we have been joined by lots of new faces. We welcome all our new members, and we are happy that you have joined us and brought your talent and energy with you!

A highlight of Thursdays is morning tea, as Lyndy continues to provide delicious things to eat week after week.

Education Centre

As you have seen, the biggest change here at the Nursery this year is the arrival and completion of the Education and Resource Centre.

It is important to realise that a good proportion of the funds used in the construction, transport, completion and fitting-out of the building came from the sale of the book Discover Warrandyte. It was published by FOWSP in 1992, and its sales put FOWSP on the sound financial footing which has enabled us to go ahead with this building project all these years later. We remember with gratitude the work of those early members of FOWSP.

The completion and fitting out of the building has been achieved by the investment of much time, effort and skill by many members, particularly Kelvin, Jason, Josh and Brian. We are extremely fortunate in having such depth of talent and such tirelessly generous members! Also a big thank-you to the committee, the new education centre couldn't have happened without you and we all look forward to the opportunities it will provide the nursery.

Other FOWSP and nursery improvements

Lovely new painted signs, a storage shed, renewed stock plants area, improved label system and a new daisy seedbank approach have all enhanced the nursery. Lots of wildflowers were grown this year. We've had great success with banksias grown from cuttings and banksias have also been grown from seed, Bend of isles Conservation Association (BICA) has assisted!

(BICA is from the Environmental Living Zone in Nilumbik). Thanks to all the dedicated volunteers.

The Spring Sale at the nursery was successful and will continue to be a yearly event.

Within Pound Bend and close to our Nursery is Frogland, which has lots of rare plants used for nursery stock. It was set up about 20 years ago. The old boardwalk had become unsafe, the site had become weedy, and new plantings were due. Under Linda Rogan's leadership Frogland has been thoroughly rejuvenated. The boardwalk has been replaced by a new path. One which enhances the bushland character of the site. Our thanks to the many members involved, especially Jason and Kelvin. In the future we plan more plantings and educational signage via any available grants.

Ongoing Projects:

Native bee nest installation area has plants in self-watering pots for a longer blooming season.

A recurrent publicity and fundraising exercise is the Market Trailer; organised this year by Caitriona and staffed every Warrandyte Market day by a dozen rostered members. Thank you to all the dedicated volunteers that have managed and assisted with maintaining and running the trailer this year. It has been an excellent public awareness instrument for promoting indigenous plants to the local community. We look forward to this continuing and developing in future. Thank you to all of those that help at the market trailer, you do an amazing job and your help is greatly appreciated.

Another fundraiser was a sausage sizzle and stall at the local IGA. This event was a great success, thanks to the efforts of Lyndy and at least a dozen other members, and to Julie Quinton.

While I think of it, I would like to acknowledge all the hard work that Linda and Joan put into the Newsletter month after month, all PV Rangers for their TAG assistance, especially to Janaya for consistent input and organisation. Thanks to Col and Justin for looking after the river pump and Col for installing the new BBQ.

Thanks again to all PV staff for support over the year.
Thank you to Manningham Council for your support

Thank you to all our loyal customers. We always enjoy hearing updates on home projects, hearing of successes (and sometimes failures) and that our plants are growing beautifully.

A big thank you to all volunteers that assist at the nursery during the year. The volunteer hours that have been logged so far in 2014 is 3,500 hours!! We literally couldn't continue our nursery work without you. Our volunteers turn up rain, hail or shine and we are very thankful that they do! Well done to all volunteers, keep up the good work!

A warm welcome to Sarah Bond who is working in the nursery now that Belinda has moved on.

A final thank you and a very heartfelt one it is too, to Josh, our Nursery Manager and his staff. It is no exaggeration to say that without Josh FOWSP would be much the poorer, in every sense. Josh's knowledge, energy and skill result in the production of a very large number of indigenous plants. These plants are propagated for planting-out in the Park, and also for sale. It is these sales that give FOWSP a degree of financial independence.

We know that we have neglected to give all the thanks that are due, but please forgive, and be assured that we really are grateful for all the help we have received this year. We couldn't have had such a productive year without every single one of your contributions.

Grassland visit Alison Thom

IN OCTOBER I spent a wonderful day, visiting and learning about the grasslands in the west of Melbourne. It was organised by the Friends of Burnley Gardens and led by John Delpratt, a lecturer at the Burnley campus.

After a short talk about the remnant grasses and other small perennials which used to cover large areas of Victoria where tree growth is minimal, we set off by bus to first of all look at the "Grasslands" installation by Linda Tegg outside the entrance of the State Library of Victoria. If you didn't get to see this you might find it hard to imagine, but it was quite magnificent! Hundreds of plants in tubes were arranged, artistically along the steps in front of the library. You would have recognised most of them - many grasses in flower, as well as lots of wildflowers - blues and yellows predominating. The plants had all been grown at Burnley in the field station but what a job to transport and then set it up! There were explanatory signs and the public was showing quite a deal of interest.

We then set off to visit a remnant wildflower grassland in Sunbury. This had been set aside several years ago, rescuing it from becoming a car park. The locals are worried what might happen to it in the future. There were many different species here, many shooting up after a recent burn. The only orchids seen were sun orchids in bud. Also a weedy species of orchid from S. Africa which might become a problem.

After a picnic lunch we headed off to the Western Plains Flora Nursery, not far away in Wildwood. This is a wholesale and retail nursery growing many thousands of local plants. A most impressive place - no weeds to be seen! Then on to a reserve in Reservoir the Ngarri-djarrang grassland, managed by the Darebin Council. Nine hectares were set aside and 121 species of native plants have been recorded. Chocolate Lilies were in abundance - the perfume proclaimed their presence. There were Milkmaids and many pea flowers of all sorts. A kangaroo bounded away and while we were there and this only a short distance for the Ring Road!

I found it inspiring to find there are people who have worked so hard to retain these areas of land to preserve plants that otherwise might be gone forever. The tour finished with a brief look at a small area in Burnley's Native Garden where they are experimenting with ways of establishing grasses and other herbs.

Two books used as reference were "Plants of Melbourne's western plains, A gardener's guide to the original flora and Field guide to Victoria's Native Grasslands."

A Beautiful Visitor Joan Broadberry

I WAS ABSORBED in an engrossing film on TV on a recent warm evening when a sudden movement caught my eye. A huge moth had landed on the screen door. I moved outside quietly and carefully examined it by torchlight. While at rest, its attractively marked wings were held in an inverted V shape over a grey, furry body almost as thick as my thumb. The moth kept very still even when I touched it, so I crept back inside and grabbed the camera. Several bad photos later, I managed a reasonable image.

I had some idea of what it might be and a few minutes internet research confirmed it was from the family Cossidae, a Wattle Goat Moth, Endoxyla lituratus. I could tell by the simple antennae that this was a female. These moths have long, narrow wings with a span of 7-10 cm. They are short-lived, do not feed and lay their eggs into holes they bore under the bark of Acacias. The caterpillars take several years to feed, grow and pupate inside the wattle. In that time they create a honeycomb of tunnels which weakens the tree. Apparently the caterpillars are smelly, hence the name 'Goat Moth'. Most of us have noticed masses of frass clinging to Black Wattle; this is a sure sign of the presence of the larvae.

Cockatoos and other birds love to rip open the tunnels and feast on them. The famed, juicy Witchetty Grub is also of the Cossidae family.

That evening I kept pausing my film and going out to admire the beautiful patterns on the wings of my visitor. She stayed until I went to bed, undoubtedly attracted by the fluorescent light. In the morning she had disappeared. I searched nearby wattle trees for an empty pupal case but found nothing.

"I SPY"

By B.G..

Catalysts from Chemical Company

Date 23 10 2014

Out of sight, down along the Lower Orchard Track at the Pound Bend Depot, a small group of nine volunteers for the day, worked with Artur Muchow removing guards and stakes etc along the track.

They were "a very productive group working". Later, after a well earned "gourmet" morning tea, they were sighted briefly at the nursery.

They came from G.S.K., a chemical company. Their contact person was Artur who is involved with an Eastern Volunteer organisation "a hub for volunteers".

Fire Flurry

During a short sortie, about 11:45am on Thursday 13 November, 2014, "yours truly" (I spy and wife) arrived at the depot to drop some large plastic pots but then were hurried to leave the depot, as were all the FOWSP volunteers, at short notice. A preventative burn was about to take place along the top bank of the Pound Bend Road (between the Pound Bend Entrance and the depot. An appropriate measures.

Conrad reports the burn was "very successful" Ed.

IN MY BACKYARD

Past FOWSP member, Marymae,.....

...is very excited about the frogmouths in her garden.

- But what is the bird doing on Marymae's desk??

Marymae's Story

As you know we have several tawny frogmouth birds in the trees around us – gives me great joy! Well, Kerrie, next door came in a couple of nights ago, saying there was a distressed young frogmouth on her back deck, and she really has almost a phobia about birds. So I went in, picked up the bird in a towel and brought it home. We put it in a small box with towels to keep it warm, and the box had a lid on it which we closed. I heard some scratching noises during the night, thought it was the bird but did nothing else. Got up next morning – AND THE BIRD WASN'T IN THE BOX!! Thoughts of it being anywhere in the house. Looked everywhere on the floor....then looked up, and there it was on my desk. Absolutely still. In the pose they take so they can't be seen in the trees. I went closer, it still didn't move. Hence the photo.

We took it downstairs, and put it under the oak tree. When I went back later in the day, it had managed to get up onto a branch. And then later, had another look, and there were two adult frog mouths in the tree. Looking on the internet –MrGoogle even knows about the habits of tawny frogmouths! When fledglings fall out of a tree, the parents will come and feed it on the ground...

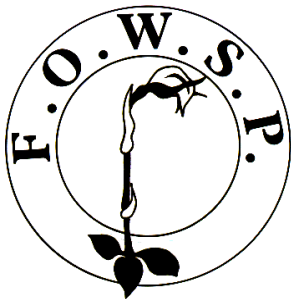

And they were all gone today!

Joy Hick's Cat Protects Wildlife

We were once cat lovers and mistakenly believed you could train them to stay inside out of harms way!

Hence this ceramic cat. It now provides a hiding place from kookaburras & next door roaming cats for skinks like this. Joy
